Pendennis Point. Falmouth, for long important as a packet station, is still more important from a picturesque point of view, and this may perhaps be had best from the green promontory known as Pendennis Point, overlooking the blue bay. Here stands a Tudor castle which sheltered Queen Henrietta Maria in 1644, and is now a Royal Artillery depot.

I'm sure I never sent a smudged p.c.! Wonder what it was! It rained all day yesterday & today there is a thick mist over land & sea! That's bad for the painting!.. If it clears we're going for a drive, but no use while like this. I have not heard from Woroldady again, but S. had pretty good acc'ts of them from Gwenny. G.H.C.
